Because yes, as each type of plant needs different care, imagine us that each one is different.
A few days ago I bought a Tamagotchi. That 90's game where a little animal just eats, you clean it and you give it attention. Practically what a baby does in its first months of life... or a plant.

Plants, where you see them, can be very complicated, like orchids, for example. They can last for years, but for that you have to water them, change their pots and soil, take care of them.
They also have to like where you put them; they have to like indirect light, and it has to be a cool place with direct light, but only a few hours a day... they are a chambon... and like that kind, many other flowers and plants.

From thinking about so many things I was left with this phrase I read that said "Humans are like plants, but with feelings".
We need sun, water, attention, cleanliness, but we have that extra. We also need coexistence, affection, thoughts and what do I know, everyone has their own list of particular needs.
Because yes, as each type of plant needs different care, imagine us that each one is different. Everyone has their own little book of needs and complexities. It only remains to say that some of us give more trouble than others, but in one way or another, we all grow.
So now, just as we take care of the plants, with their specific care, we have to take care of ourselves in the same way. We have to feed ourselves with what gives us life, water ourselves with the things that make us happy and put ourselves in the places where we feel we grow.
And finally, we must never forget our feelings, we have to take care of them and keep them healthy too, at the end of the day, that is what makes us human.

"From thinking about so many things I was left with this phrase I read that said "Humans are like plants, but with feelings".
